This is the first paragraph of the article. It should appear with proper spacing and formatting. This paragraph contains multiple sentences to test how the formatter handles longer content blocks. This is a second paragraph that comes after a double line break. The formatter should recognize this as a separate paragraph and add appropriate spacing. Bold Text Example: This paragraph contains bold formatting that should be preserved in the PDF output.

Italic Text Example: This sentence contains italic formatting for emphasis. Section Header Example This paragraph comes after what should be recognized as a section header. The formatter should style the header differently from regular body text. This is a longer paragraph that tests the formatter's ability to handle substantial amounts of text content. It should be properly justified and formatted with appropriate line spacing.

The text should flow naturally and be easy to read in the final PDF output. This paragraph intentionally contains multiple sentences to test how the formatter handles paragraph breaks and spacing when dealing with longer content blocks that might span multiple lines in the final document. Final paragraph to test the overall structure and flow of the document formatting.
